Overview of ADR Providers

Confusion, gaps, and overlaps

A consumer perspective on alternative dispute resolution between consumers and businesses

OVERVIEW MAP OF ADR PROVIDERS IN THE UK

The maps below are organized according to the following criteria:

Map 1: list of certified ADR providers in the United Kingdom and to the European Commission <sup>1</sup>

Map 2: ADR providers in the United Kingdom that are not officially certified

Categories in the maps' columns:

- Delivery organization: who actually does the ADR work, and who administers the scheme (where this is relevant).
- Name: Stated name of scheme.
- ❖ Type of complaints/sector: This is the category of the subject matter complained about.
- Activity: As described by the ADR bodies themselves, but adjudication is used where there is a formal decision making process, and 'not stated' is where it isn't clear.
- ❖ Geographical coverage: this indicates who the service is available to. It is UK-wide by default unless otherwise noted.
- Target Consumer Group: This area generally matches the sector column, unless the scheme is specifically available for certain demographics.
- Competent Authority: the body that has regulatory responsibility or oversight under any enactment.
- * Free to consumer: here proportional cost means a cost above notional.
- * Mandatory to business: This relates to whether businesses are required to take part in a scheme, and doesn't relate to whether decisions are binding.
- * Other: link to the website or document (available online) where information is located.

Challenges in collecting the data

Several methodological challenges were faced when creating the maps below.

How to record ADR schemes. One issue was how ADR schemes should be recorded. We followed the approach used by the Office of Fair Trading in its previous mapping exercise conducted in 2010. This involves recording discrete ADR schemes even where they are provided by one umbrella ADR organisation. For example, rather than recording Ombudsman Services Ltd or the Centre for Effective Disputes Resolution as single schemes, we list in the map each of the discrete schemes operated by these umbrella bodies.

How to name ADR processes. Terminology is used inconsistently between ADR schemes and there are no widely accepted definitions of key concepts such as 'ombudsman', 'conciliation', 'adjudication', etc. In addition, some schemes use multiple processes within a single scheme. Given the often vague information available about how schemes actually operate, we relied on schemes' own descriptions of their processes e.g. where schemes said they conciliated, this is what we have recorded.

The source of the information. Much of the information on which the map is based is available online. For non-certified schemes, there is no central repository of information about ADR schemes. As a result, we cannot be certain that (despite our best efforts in searching the internet) the map is comprehensive. In some areas, multiple small schemes exist and new schemes can be created (and, indeed, cease functioning) from day to day. In the case of schemes operated by local trading standards departments, the local nature of these schemes and differences in terminology mean that mapping this particular area is especially complex.

Discrepancies and inconsistencies in data. There were some inconsistencies in published data, for example, the number of schemes listed as approved on the European Commission website was different to the number of schemes we identified. This reflects a different approach to categorising ADR providers. The European Commission lists the umbrella ADR provider, as well as discrete schemes operated by an ADR provider, in some cases. The European Commission's approach may be unhelpful in this respect, as it may give the impression that all the schemes operated by an ADR provider are approved, whereas some may not be. Generally, we have taken information we found on ADR providers' websites in good faith e.g. where they said they were approved under the ADR Directive, we accepted that, even if they did not specifically appear on the European Commission's published list.

&lt;sup>4</sup> Local Authority Trading Standards Services provide a number of ADR schemes which vary between local authorities. Some local authorities support a Trusted Trader Scheme (e.g. East Lothian, Dundee or Nottinghamshire whilst others may run schemes under the Checkatrader umbrella (e.g. Derbyshire). Some run both (Surrey and Buckinghamshire). Other local authorities provide stand-alone schemes (e.g. Hull Motor Trade Partnership). There is therefore lots of diversity within this area, which due to time constraints has not been looked at for this report. It does however illustrate the complexity of the landscape in this area and further potential for confusion.
